Council Funds ARPA $100K For Volunteer Firefighters.

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

Much of the July 8 council meeting dealt with the departure of 24 career firefighters from the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department on June 30.

"[W]e're doing our best to re-engage the county, change their decision on this, and we welcome citizen participation and writing letters, calling county council, calling [the] executive, calling Prince George's County Fire Chief Tiffany D. Green. We welcome all those activities," said City Manager Josué Salmerón.

Though the temporary restraining order was denied, "it's not the end of the road for us," assured Salmerón. "We'll continue to work on our strategy – well we can't disclose all of that – but we want the residents to know we're committed to finding the best solutions to serving the interest and the public well-being of our residents."

Mayor Emmett Jordan said council hadn't wanted to file legal action "but we felt that we did not have any other choice."

Salmerón put forward a proposal to reallocate $100,000 of the lost revenue category of American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) funds to go toward retention and recruitment incentives for volunteer firefighters. Previously $800,000 of this ARPA money was allocated for the pool deck renovations that the city now believes will be covered under Program Open Space funding, explained Salmerón. "A basis of the county's summer staffing program is on the reliance of volunteer firefighters at our station," said Salmerón who said he'd heard from the chiefs at Greenbelt and Berwyn Heights that they do not have the volunteers to cover the gap. "Our proposal for $100,000 cannot under any stretch of the imagination cover the gap that is being

Animal Shelter Is Down to One Officer Following Resignations

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

Greenbelt animal shelter

Over the last couple of weeks two of Greenbelt's three animal control officers have resigned, including Supervisor Walter Rivas-Flores, who had worked at the shelter since 2022 and became the supervisor in January this year. Earlier this year Rivas-Flores, who personally trained every volunteer, spoke enthusiastically about his big plans for the future of the shelter and described his work as "a labor of love."

During the July 8 Greenbelt City Council meeting, resident Elizabeth Tobey called on council to support the recently beleaguered animal shelter. Tobey, who has volunteered at the shelter since 2012, thanked the city for maintaining the only municipal shelter in the county and expressed her support for the animal control officers. She lamented that the shelter has faced a lot of challenges in recent years and stressed the great need for it, in particular due to evictions, animals left behind in apartments and those found abandoned and abused.

She expressed concern about the turnover of animal control officers and asked what could be done to support them. "They're very hard working and dedicated but I'm wondering if they are getting enough support to be able to do their jobs properly," said Tobey. "What can we do as a city and a community to support the animal control officers and the shelter so that they can continue to help animals. And in helping animals we also do help people," said Tobey.

Construction Materials Cause Fire at Greenbelt Elementary

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

At approximately 10:53 p.m. on Monday, July 15 a fire was reported at Greenbelt Elementary School. Neighbors reported hearing an explosion prior to the fire. Engines from multiple fire departments responded, including Berwyn Heights and College Park. The section of Ridge Road surrounding the school was closed. The fire was put out approximately 50 minutes later at 11:40 p.m.

Preliminary reports say the fire was limited to roofing material and equipment located on-site. No damage was reported to the school and there were no injuries.

The cause of the fire was still under investigation at press time.

An anhinga visits Greenbelt Lake on Monday, July 15. Usually not found outside tropical swamps, and rarely north of Florida, the anhinga is related to cormorants. They fish underwater, spearing fish with their bill. When they are swimming only the head and neck are above water, leading to the nickname "snake bird." Anhinga are rare visitors to this county; this is the first one seen this year and perhaps the first ever in Greenbelt. Identification was confirmed by reviewers at the citizen science bird-tracking program ebird.com.

Letters to the Editor

Elementary Noise

I too live near Greenbelt Elementary school and share James William Thompson's complaint. The construction noise (and asphalt stench) has been limiting my backyard leisure.

But that noise should really be calibrated against the school-year sounds. I'm talking about the daily routine when the school opens its back doors and those little mammals come running out, eyes misaligned and screeching like the field below them is an electrified grid. What are some construction sounds compared to explosive sounds of mirth?

Weather Alert Settings

Editor's Note: We received a letter complaining about weather alerts arriving via phone calls in the middle of the night. If you, too, have begun receiving alerts at unwanted hours during the recent severe heat, you can adjust your weather alert settings on the city's website. Visit greenbeltdmd.gov/services/greenbelt-alerts where you can sign up or log into your existing account. ## On Screen at Greenbelt Cinema

Thelma

Inspired by a real-life experience of director Josh Margolin's own grandmother, the film shines the spotlight on an elderly grandmother as an unlikely action hero. Margolin employs the familiar tropes of the action genre in hilarious, age-appropriate ways to tackle aging with agency. In the first leading film role of her 70-year career, June Squibb portrays the strong-willed Thelma with grit and determination, demonstrating that she is more than capable of taking care of business – despite what her daughter Gail (Parker Posey), son-in-law Alan (Clark Gregg) or grandson Danny (Fred Hechinger) might believe.

Kinds of Kindness

From director Yorgos Lanthimos (who directed The Favorite and Poor Things), this triptych fable follows a man without choice who tries to take control of his own life; a policeman who is alarmed that his wife who was missing at sea has returned and seems a different person; and a woman determined to find a specific someone with a special ability, who is destined to become a prodigious spiritual leader.

Janet Planet

In rural Western Massachusetts, 11-year-old Lacy (Zoe Ziegler) spends the summer of 1991 at home, enthralled by her own imagination and the attention of her mother, Janet (Julianne Nicholson). Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Annie Baker captures a child's experience of time passing, and the ineffability of a daughter falling out of love with her mother, in this singularly sublime film debut with outstanding performances by Nicholson and newcomer Ziegler.

A Hard Day's Night

The Beatles feature film debut is one of the greatest rock-and-roll comedy adventures ever. The film has a fully restored negative and digitally restored soundtrack and takes on the just-left-of-reality style of mock-documentary, following "a day in the life" of John, Paul, George and Ringo as fame takes them by storm.

Mulan

Fearful that her ailing father will be drafted into the Chinese military, Mulan (Ming-Na Wen) takes his spot. She impersonates a man and goes off to train with fellow recruits. Accompanied by her dragon, Mushu (Eddie Murphy), she helps ward off a Hun invasion, falling in love with a dashing captain along the way.

The Terminator - 40th Anniv. 4K Restoration

In 2029, the war between man and machine has desolated the Earth, leaving humanity all but wiped out. From this wasteland, two soldiers are sent to Los Angeles, 1984, to influence the outcome of a conflict that hasn't taken place yet. One is an unstoppable cyborg assassin, the other a human guerrilla fighter. Serving on opposite sides of the battle, they share the same target: Sarah Connor, an unsuspecting young woman whose unborn child will become the key to saving mankind.

Unearthing Greenbelt's Gardens on Thursday

Learn about Greenbelt's historic gardens on Thursday, July 18 at 7 p.m. in the Community Center, Room 201. The city's community gardens, part of the original design plan, are mostly tucked away at the edges of town, easy to miss. But the community gardens are as much an integral component as the iconic superblocks, underpasses and pedestrian walkways. While some garden locations have remained exactly the same since the first hoe struck dirt in 1938, others have been whittled away, moved, destroyed or lost to the misty haze of memory. Using historic research and modern mapping technology, Greenbelt's historic gardens will be unearthed to tell their part of the story of Greenbelt's development over the past 87 years.

The speaker, Stephen Oetken, has been a volunteer docent, researcher, lecturer and walking tour leader for the Greenbelt Museum since 1999. Oetken is a lifelong Greenbelter, with degrees in history and historic preservation. The talk is a free, in-person event. While advance registration is not required, those who do register will receive reminders for the event. The talk will take place in Room 201, the Multi-purpose Room of the Community Center. Free parking is available.

The event is co-sponsored by Friends of the Greenbelt Museum, the Recreation Department and the City of Greenbelt.

Kap was with the Quantum Company for 35 years and "maintained an unwavering commitment to ensuring the growth of Beltway Plaza and the City of Greenbelt as a whole." Quantum Companies said he was particularly proud of the Wall of Fame he established in the mall. Kap also led the recognition ceremony of Greenbelt Cinema's Executive Director Caitlin McGrath at the Greenbelt Wall of Fame. He described McGrath as "an outstanding role model" for her contributions to revitalizing the theater.

In his position at Quantum Companies, Kap was a leading contributor in the redevelopment efforts of Beltway Plaza. He sought to bring 2,500 multifamily units, 25,000 square feet of indoor recreation space and 700,000 square feet of retail space. He continued to support innovations at the mall, including the current expansion and renovations.

Kap was also a great supporter of the Greenbelt News Review. In the February 25, 2016, issue we published his letter, Confessions of a News Reviewaholic. "Frankly, I have no idea how I managed to keep abreast of what's happening in Greenbelt before I discovered the GNR. So enamored of it am I that I make it a point to whole-heartedly recommend it to newcomers as essential weekly reading."

Find More Peace Through Meditation

In today's world, many people have trouble falling asleep and feel stress or anxiety. Could meditation help them?

Katrina Boverman, a longtime meditation instructor with the Seasoned Adults Growing Educationally (SAGE) program, and the Mishkan Torah Synagogue Sisterhood have quietly offered Summer Guided Meditation classes to Greenbelters and others for the past nine years. Although the synagogue itself is a wonderful peaceful setting welcoming to all, meditation this year will be offered via Zoom to attend from the comfort of your own home.

Attendees have expressed quieting of their bodies, minds and spirits, a deepening of inner stillness and a better ability to reconnect with themselves. They have described feeling more peaceful, serene, relaxed, mindful and present, both during and in between the classes. ### PUBLIC STATEMENT REGARDING PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY FIRE/EMS SUMMER STAFFING PLAN FOR GREENBELT VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT

Greenbelt, MD - The City of Greenbelt is disappointed in the County's decision to reassign 24 career personnel from Greenbelt Station 835 on July 1, resulting in the removal of all career personnel from our Station. County Fire Chief Tiffany Green and County leadership ordered the redeployment of 55 career firefighters from Berwyn Heights, Greenbelt, Bunker Hill, and Bowie Station. We are gravely concerned with the impact in response times of emergencies in Greenbelt and our surrounding areas.

Greenbelt will continue to work in tandem with College Park and Berwyn Heights alongside County leadership in addressing our concerns and fighting for the City of Greenbelt.

July Proclaimed Parks, Recreation Month; Department Recognized

At the July 8 Greenbelt City Council meeting the Recreation Department was recognized and the month of July proclaimed Parks and Recreation month in Greenbelt. Recreation Director Greg Varda called on folks to visit a park or recreation center this month and acknowledged the importance of Greenbelt's park rangers.

Recreation Coordinator Patrick Mullen recognized the department's partners, including Public Works and the Police Department. Since Mullen began working with the department in 2018 the park rangers have dramatically expanded their work, he said. However, they remain firstly ambassadors, he said. "Our primary function is to inform and educate and help all of our patrons interface with and use our park system in a way that is fair and equitable and of course safe for our parks and for themselves," said Mullen. Mullen highlighted new interpretive programming. Upcoming programming includes another planned Birding 101 session for the fall migration, another kayak tour of Greenbelt Lake and a Ranger Day at Kindercamp.

Mayor Emmett Jordan praised the staff and their work in all conditions, including the recent heat.

City Councilmembers, Residents Review Charter Review Proposal

by Diane Oberg

On July 10, the Greenbelt City Council considered how best to approach the upcoming charter review initiative. At its June 17 regular meeting, council authorized expenditures of up to $15,000 in legal fees for this work. (Readers may view the charter at greenbeltdmd.gov by clicking on Government and then, under City Administration, clicking on City Code).

City Manager Josué Salmerón's proposed approach (developed by Assistant City Manager Timothy George) has three stages: legal review for compliance with state and county requirements; city staff review from an operational and best practices perspective; and review by a Community Commission, including review of the findings from the previous two steps. The proposal calls for the staff review team to include the city manager, assistant city manager, three councilmembers and staff from several city departments. The Community Commission would consist of three residents, representatives from three businesses, three city staffers, three councilmembers and four representatives from city advisory boards and committees. The procedures for amending a city charter are governed by state law.

There will be a final, broader opportunity for public comment once the changes to be implemented are finalized. Under state laws, charter amendments are implemented by council resolution, which requires two hearings.

By the end of the meeting, Salmerón was tasked with developing a revised proposal based upon the comments received. The major areas of concern are as follows.

Community Commission

Councilmember Rodney Roberts immediately objected to just three residents, aside from board/committee members, being involved in the review. Councilmember Jenni Pompi suggested that a representative from the Reparations Commission also be appointed to the commission. Councilmember Danielle McKinney called for inclusion of youth, a mix of businesses, ethnic and economic diversity as well as the disabled community.

Board of Elections member Beth Terry voiced concern that if the commission is presented with a proposal coming out of legal and staff review, the commission may feel limited to providing feedback on that proposal rather than suggesting new ideas.

Resident Bill Orleans objected to local businesses being included in the Community Commission, noting that the business representatives might not even be Greenbelters.

Resident Ed Fallon said that the commission should reflect the 75 percent of residents who are people of color as well as the 50 percent who rent, rather than the primarily white homeowners who typically participate in city affairs.

Outstanding Citizen 2014

Greenbelt Pioneer K. McFarland Lived All that the City Offered

Lois Rosado

Kathleen McFarland died on April 11, 2023. She was a 95-year-old Greenbelt Pioneer, having moved here in 1938 when her family was one of the first selected to live in the new Greenbelt homes built by the federal government.

Kathleen, always an upbeat person, had a ready smile for those she encountered. She learned to play the clarinet at age 12 and joined the Greenbelt Community Band when it was formed in 1940. She attended Greenbelt Elementary School (now the Community Center) and Greenbelt High School. She and her siblings were perennially engaged and took advantage of many of the amenities and activities available for youth.

Kathleen married Henry T. McFarland, a classmate and fellow clarinetist, in 1949 and had eight children who were also raised in Greenbelt. She was a member of St. Hugh of Grenoble Catholic Church where she joined the Sodality of the Blessed Mother. According to her obituary Kathleen was an active member of the Ladies of Charity and served as president. She was a contributor to the Greenbelt News Review and a member of the Golden Age Club and the Greenbelt Intergenerational Volunteer Exchange Service (GIVES). After her husband died, she joined the Patuxent Widowed Persons Service Group and served as secretary for 10 years.

Kathleen was very honored and happy to have been selected as the Greenbelt Outstanding Citizen in 2014 and was surprised by the award. I asked her a year later how she was enticed to attend the opening ceremony and she stated that she always attended the opening ceremonies, especially when the Concert Band played first. What shocked her, that night, was when her children and grandchildren popped up from their seats to accompany her to the podium. Her large family had kept the secret about her selection.

She loved playing pickleball. In her words, "We are all lucky to live in a town where there are so many activities to join, and people interested in the health and well-being of all the town's citizens, both young and old."

Kathleen McFarland will always be remembered for her smile, laugh, generous spirit and volunteer work to help others live better lives in Greenbelt.

Gov. Moore Announces MOU With Goddard and MEDCO

Governor Wes Moore announced on Wednesday, May 29 that the Maryland Department of Commerce signed a new memorandum of understanding (MOU) with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) Goddard Space Flight Center and the Maryland Economic Development Corporation (MEDCO). The three-year agreement will support growth in Maryland's aerospace economy in the area surrounding Goddard, located in Greenbelt, and on the Eastern Shore near the rocket launch site Wallops Flight Facility.

"NASA and MEDCO are synonymous with innovation, growth, discovery and strength. Today, the State of Maryland reaffirms our commitment to these principles, and others, by investing in this partnership," said Governor Moore. "Maryland is ready to lead, and by standing united with our partners in both the public and private sector, we will make Maryland more competitive and position our state to win the decade."

Under the memorandum, Commerce and Goddard will collaborate to promote technology transfer, Science, Technology, Engineering and Math (STEM) education, aerospace industry development and community outreach, including raising awareness of resources such as Small Business Innovation Research and Small Business Technology Transfer funding. The funding supports the creation and growth of new space-related businesses, leading economic development efforts around the two NASA facilities, and collaborating on a report analyzing Goddard's economic impact in Maryland.

"Maintaining and growing Maryland's strategic advantage in the aerospace industry requires collaboration with our formidable partners at facilities like the Goddard Space Flight Center," said Maryland Department of Commerce Secretary Kevin Anderson. "We're thrilled to sign this agreement, which will support NASA's innovative work and help make our state more competitive."

The memorandum signing followed a joint workshop on the workforce needs of Maryland's aerospace industry, led by Lieutenant Governor Aruna Miller and attended by Maryland Historically Black Colleges and Universities representatives, other education stakeholders and industry leaders.

"This agreement will allow us to advance innovation and increase equitable access to STEM education for Marylanders, and it reflects our commitment to doing so in partnership," said Miller. "By bringing together government, industry and education, we have what it takes to prepare for the workforce needs of our time, making our state more competitive in the process. An investment in STEM is an investment in Maryland's future."

"Our cutting-edge research, and the critical benefits it provides to society, is only possible with the support of strong partnerships outside NASA," said Goddard Center Director Dr. Makenzie Lystrup, who signed the memo on NASA's behalf. "I'm grateful to clasp hands with our home state and work together to build up the coalition that will help us all make those next giant leaps."

MEDCO will work with Commerce and NASA to host business outreach events in Prince George's County and on the Eastern Shore.

"MEDCO is proud to team with our partners at Maryland Commerce and support the vital mission at Goddard Space Flight Center," said MEDCO Executive Director Tom Sadowski. "By applying our full capabilities, we will foster innovation and collaborations with education and industry that enhances the mission and helps drive Maryland's innovation-rich economy."

School News

AllHere Chatbot Is All Gone From PGCPS; Issues Remain

by Daniel Thies

On June 18, AllHere informed Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) that it would no longer be able to provide its interactive messaging system services due to what it described as "unforeseen financial circumstances."

AllHere is an educational technology company that had been providing its text-based chatbot service for the school system, which the student government nicknamed JARVIS (Just A Really Very Intelligent System). JARVIS was rolled out with the intent of reducing chronic absenteeism by messaging parents and guardians to keep them up to date with their child's attendance and school performance. In January 2020, the JARVIS program was piloted at 30 PGCPS schools. In the February report to the County Board of Education's Academic Achievement Committee meeting on AllHere's program, these 30 schools were selected because they had the highest degree of chronic absences in the county. One of these initial schools was Greenbelt's Springhill Lake Elementary.

In the time since the initial roll out, AllHere and PGCPS' relationship has grown. In 2022, the scope of JARVIS was expanded to 33 schools in the county, and the school system's chief executive officer budget accounted for over 3,000 staff hours saved through use of the program. Later that year, AllHere also nominated Dr. Elizabeth Fiason, PGCPS associate superintendent of Student Services, for the eSchool News Hero Awards; the nomination was in part for Fiason's promotion of AllHere's services.

In spring of this year, there were indicators that the relationship would continue to grow. In March, AllHere secured a multi-million dollar contract to produce a machine learning messaging system, nicknamed Ed. By April, the Prince George's County Board of Education released a policy on artificial intelligence (AI) stating that "the board recognizes that the use of artificial intelligence can, when used appropriately, enhance student learning." In turn, the school system announced a multiyear Artificial Intelligence Implementation Framework, which would seek ways to apply AI tools for staff and students.

Despite AllHere's expanding role in PGCPS as well as other school systems across the country, the company hit dire straits soon after the March announcement of Ed. Two months after the announcement, AllHere co-founder Joanna Smith-Griffin left her role as the CEO and most of its staff was furloughed. Chris Whiteley, a former AllHere employee and whistleblower, told the news group The74 that AllHere was also failing to protect the personally identifiable information of students. Allegedly, AllHere's Los Angeles Chatbot was using servers in other countries to store and process requests for information on students, making the data vulnerable to hackers. So far, there has been no indication that data of PGCPS students and staff were similarly compromised, and under the Maryland Personal Information Protection Act PGCPS is responsible for informing anyone who was affected of a data breach.

PGCPS was contacted regarding how it plans to manage the loss of AllHere's services, and when the public should expect to know more. As of this reporting, they will be looking for an alternative interactive messaging system this summer to replace AllHere if it will no longer be available.

left by the county but it goes a long way to helping support the volunteer firefighters, that in addition to their full-time obligations and other obligations have given up their free time to support our communities and our neighbors in Berwyn Heights and College Park," explained Salmerón. He wanted to leave the incentives open-ended to work out with Greenbelt Fire Chief Thomas Ray, but they might include gift cards for transportation, for example, as well as performance-based rewards for staff. The city suggested stipends for volunteers but the county was in opposition to that, said Salmerón, thus the city is leaving the language open to figure out with the chief "so that we don't further antagonize the county on this matter."

Ray could not attend the meeting, but later suggested that council look into a city tax break program like that in neighboring Laurel.

Jordan stressed the lack of time the city was given to plan for this situation and advocated for discretionary funding, especially since council would not meet again until the second week of August. Salmerón added that he would keep council informed.

Slow Onboarding

Councilmember Kristen Weaver called the measure a stopgap, expressed hope that the summer staffing would be temporary and some firefighters would be returned in October, and also suggested some of the funding could be used for the required training and certification for volunteers. Salmerón concurred that the county's training involved bureaucracy and an excessive amount of time for onboarding. Councilmember Silke Pope noted the police department had been able to give signing bonuses to new officers. She also suggested asking the county to hold a training in Greenbelt. Jordan recommended an intensive training course. After the meeting, Ray clarified that firefighter training is available for free through the Maryland Fire and Rescue Institute at seven locations in Maryland, but paramedic programs are only available through colleges for a fee.

Pope cautioned that they must be prepared in case it is not temporary and that career staff may not return. Councilmember Jenni Pompi noted the county was clear that what they would do in October was reassess, not necessarily return the firefighters.

Pompi made the motion that the city allocate up to $100,000 from ARPA funds to provide stipends and incentives to fire protection staff.

Resident and former mayor Judith Davis noted that the city owns the fire department building, and if the city cannot fill it with volunteer firefighters, neither will it be possible to get county support for building a new fire department at the armory as hoped.

Calls for Public Pressure

Resident Theresa Hornung argued that there needed to be resident involvement. "You're not involving the community, so no noise is being made, so why should Green do anything?" asked Hornung. Jordan noted that the city had filed legal measures and advertised a list of people to contact in the July 11 News Review. Yet there was no online push, argued Hornung.

"I certainly would love our residents to write to everybody," said Salmerón, who suggested the call could go in the city newsletter. "We've been trying to manage the relationship. I think with the lawsuit ... it would be fair to say we can ask our residents to just jump onboard," Salmerón said. Hornung said it seemed the city was accepting the situation and waiting until October. "I think you're not seeing a lot of what is happening," argued Weaver. "That doesn't mean it's not happening and sometimes it's more effective to have some of the conversations behind the scenes," Weaver told Hornung. "I know you guys can't say the real reason it's going on. I get it. I understand that," replied Hornung.

Political Impetus

"The person who is mostly responsible for this, I believe, is running for the United States Senate ... so this is the perfect time to say, hey, why are you doing this to us? This should be a part of the debate about who we want to represent us in the United States Senate," said Councilmember Rodney Roberts. "That's the only way we're going to resolve it, really, is through public pressure. Public pressure is number one," Roberts said, as Hornung concurred.

Resident Bill Orleans wanted to invite the county executive and fire chief to a public meeting in Greenbelt, rather than working behind the scenes or privately, so they could be asked questions directly. Orleans also called for professional firefighters throughout the county rather than a reliance on volunteers.

Legal action is still on the table, noted Salmerón, though discussion of that strategy needs to happen in closed session, he said. Councilmember Amy Knesel said they were relying on the voices of community members as they figure out legal options. "I would also like to point out that if the person does not get elected to the Senate, she is our county executive for another two years so these are all things that we need to keep in mind as we figure out the best way to support our fire station." Resident Bob Rudd asked council to look at calling back funds from every department and service in order to implement whatever is needed to make Greenbelt safe. He also called for council to show "political courage ... Whatever you're doing behind the scenes ... it is now time to do it in front of the scenes, in front of the cameras," said Rudd, who called on council to censure County Executive Angela Alsobrooks.

Knesel offered an amendment to reduce the proposed amount of discretionary funds from $100,000 to $54,200 (the amount cited by Ray as the cost to fully staff an ambulance with basic life support for overnight shifts through October). Knesel's motion was rejected as a friendly amendment by Pope, who had seconded the original motion. Pope argued they wouldn't be meeting for over a month so the city manager should have authority to use the funds because "time is of the essence ... I'll pull my amendment but I just want it noted that the expense makes me uncomfortable given that we don't even know how much more we're up against," said Knesel.

The motion to allocate $100,000 then passed unanimously.

According to the proposal, "stipends and incentives" will go into effect as soon as possible, likely from mid-July until October, to be adjusted if some or all career firefighters are returned.

A closed executive session followed the council meeting.

Development in Greenbelt

From a Federally-owned Town To a Member-owned Cooperative

by Jim Giese

Part 1 of a series

I arrived in Greenbelt in December 1962 to become the city's fourth city manager, having recently turned 32. During my 28 years in the role, I spent much time acting on behalf of the city council as it waged battle after battle with land development proposals. When I arrived, the majority of land within the city was undeveloped. When I retired, little land remained to be privately developed. While my work primarily involved working with developer representatives such as attorneys, planners, architects, engineers and project managers, I also got to meet with and know slightly the men (no women) who developed the vacant land in Greenbelt.

What impressed me about the developers was that they were involved in major construction projects while still, for the most part, fairly young, some just a few years older or younger than I was. I considered myself to be somewhat successful, being paid a salary of $10,000 to manage a city with a budget just over $300,000. Yet these developers were earning who knows what kind of money while undertaking projects costing in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

I often wondered what brought these men together to acquire Greenbelt land, but I never had a clue as to the answer. I wondered if there were family ties, but became aware of only a few. Were they or their parents members of the same churches or synagogues? Or social or golf clubs? Where did they get their start-up money? From parents? Through marriage?

So now, at an advanced age, with time on my hands and a computer in my lap, I decided to do online research about these men of my past who are now nearly all dead. My study does not include every developer of Greenbelt but focuses on those who achieved the most prominence during my early years in Greenbelt, the 1960s. While I have come to learn a lot about these developers, there is much I still don't know. However, whatever their backgrounds or connections, there is no doubt that the success these men had was largely due to their own abilities and accomplishments.

In researching the developers, it became apparent that I would also need to understand the history of development in Greenbelt. From the start Greenbelt was planned to become a larger community but that was intended to be under the concepts of English garden cities and the design principles of the original community. Developers initially subscribed to these principles but the desire for maximum profit led them to seek building options contrary to the original plan.

What was built in the initial phase of development over a period of some 15 years may not have met the planning goals of the original planners or city council and many Greenbelt residents, but it has held up well and remains viable with little change some 60 to 80 years later.

Greenbelt Development, Part 1

How did the federally-owned property in Greenbelt get into private ownership and the control of these developers? In preparing this history, I have drawn heavily upon articles published in the Greenbelt News Review and the Greenbelt Cooperator (the paper's name from November 1937 to July 1954) as well as information provided in Greenbelt: History of a New Town, 1937-1987, Mary Lou Williamson, editor.

From 1935 to about 1937 the U.S. Department of Agriculture bought the marginal farmland and woodland that would become the Town of Greenbelt. Much land was purchased even before Congressional authorization to build the four model "green towns" developed by the Resettlement Administration under the leadership of Rexford Tugwell. Authorizations to purchase land for the adjacent Beltsville Agricultural Research Center were used to buy land for the proposed planned community. But even before Greenbelt was completed, I have been told, bad press had convinced Congress to let land development be done by private investors, and Congress ordered the sale of Greenbelt. That did not quickly happen. Government wartime expansion even before Pearl Harbor led the government to build housing in Greenbelt for defense workers (viewed then as temporary housing, now the frame homes in the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. housing cooperative). Further delay resulted from the decision to construct the Baltimore-Washington Parkway using government-owned land within Greenbelt for some of its right-of-way, and by the Korean War – the Greenbelt property was considered a site for dispersal or relocation of federal agencies, should the war escalate.

Finally, in 1953, the Public Housing Administration (PHA) sold the Greenbelt property. Most of the original town, except for the apartment buildings and the commercial center, was sold, effective January 1, 1953, to the Greenbelt Veterans Housing Corporation (GVHC), a housing cooperative formed by the residents. PHA transferred to the City of Greenbelt the water and sewer systems, underpasses, landfill, community building, lake, parks, playgrounds and other recreational facilities.

GVHC also took possession of the more than 800 acres of fields and forest surrounding the community – the green belt. Land west of Edmonston Road and east of the new Baltimore-Washington Parkway would be sold to private interests. Thus, the stage was set for private development to begin in Greenbelt.

SUN Bucks to Help Families Buy Groceries During Summer

Governor Wes Moore today announced the launch of Maryland SUN Bucks, a new program to help families buy groceries for eligible school-aged children during the summer months. Building on the state's existing Summer Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) program, Maryland SUN Bucks will serve a record 543,000 children across the state through more than $60 million in new funding from the federal government.

"During the summer, many children lose the free and reduced-price meals they receive at school, and households may need help putting food on the table. Our administration is here to help fill that gap," said Moore. "Tackling childhood poverty requires consistent, targeted action so all Marylanders can stay healthy as they play, grow and learn. The launch of Maryland SUN Bucks marks one such action – and it won't be the last."

Maryland SUN Bucks builds upon Maryland's existing Summer SNAP program and expands the reach six-fold. Families in all of Maryland's 24 jurisdictions are now able to receive benefits and local government matching funds are no longer required.

"There isn't a single jurisdiction in Maryland that isn't interested in helping fight childhood poverty. Maryland SUN Bucks extends food security provided by school meals to summertime; and it represents the single largest investment Maryland has seen to help feed our children," said Maryland Department of Human Services Secretary Rafael López. "We are grateful for our partners in the state legislature and the Biden Administration for working with us to make sure Maryland's children do not experience hunger."

Households that qualify for the Maryland SUN Bucks program will receive $40 each month in June, July and August – totaling $120 – to buy food for each eligible student. Benefits may be used at authorized retailers, including grocery stores and farmers markets.

Up to 90 percent of eligible Maryland families will receive the benefits automatically, though some parents will need to apply. For families receiving SNAP benefits, Maryland SUN Bucks will be automatically applied to the head-of-household's Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT) card. If a child does not receive SNAP, a white Maryland SUN Bucks card will be issued in the child's name.

Maryland SUN Bucks is in addition to free meals that kids of all ages can get at summer meal sites in their communities, such as at Springhill Lake Elementary School.

"For many children, schools are lifelines to regular and nutritious meals. Maryland SUN Bucks will improve access to healthy food options during the summer months," said State Superintendent of Schools Dr. Carey M. Wright. This innovative partnership connects families to a basic resource at a critical time.

More information on the program is available at dhs.maryland.gov/sunbucks or 1-800-332-6347.

Council Allocates $72K for HR System; Quoted $120K Annually

by Maurice Crawford

Greenbelt's Human Resources department is seeking $72K of American Rescue Plan Act funds to purchase software developed by Paycor to help with human resources and workforce management. Currently, the department uses Excel spreadsheets, which is reportedly inefficient.

At council's June 17 meeting, Director of Human Resources Dawane Martinez gave an overview of the vendor selection process. First, the city asked for companies to submit bids for a Human Resource Information System (HRIS). This request went to over 40 vendors and the city received four bids in October 2023. Second, the bids were evaluated using several criteria, for example, ease of integrating with the payroll system or its ability to help with compliance in the city. Finally, three potential vendors were invited to give a presentation on their product and in the end Paycor was identified as the top choice.

Mayor Emmett Jordan asked the Paycor representative (attending online) if this was a subscription service or if the city would own the software. The representative said the system is software as a service and the cost is per employee/per month.

There was some confusion over the exact cost of Paycor's HRIS as raised by Councilmember Kristen Weaver, who pointed out that the contract says $72K but then there is an annualized amount of $120,765. Councilmember Amy Knesel also felt that future costs were unclear and wondered how much the cost would be for next year. The Paycor representative said that they don't charge the city until the system goes live. From July 2024 through next June (Fiscal Year 2025) the only fees that will be applicable will be the implementation fee ($31K) plus the first six months of the per employee/per month cost which amounts to approximately $72K. Also, because the cost is on a per employee/per month basis the fee fluctuates; therefore in the summer when employee numbers increase so does the cost. According to the Paycor representative, for Fiscal Year 2026 the cost is expected to be about $102K (which includes a promotional discount); however, in the quote provided by Paycor, future annual costs are estimated at $120K.

Councilmember Danielle McKinney wanted to know if there is a plan for training employees and what the date is for the new system to be activated. Martinez responded that there would be training but it is a self-service system with an app that would allow one to check benefits, pay stubs, etc. The plan is for the system to go live on January 1, 2025. Paycor does provide 24-hour software support.

The motion for allocation of the $72,000 passed.

"We understand the concerns. I am saddened that Walter resigned. He was doing such a great job," said City Manager Josué Salmerón of the former shelter supervisor. "It's a tough job.... It's hard to do that work." He said that the second animal control officer had resigned that day.

"We're actively recruiting for those two positions, but we [will] keep things in place to ensure that we have some basic operation at the animal shelter," Salmerón said during his report.

He said the city also wished the conditions at the shelter were better, in particular to have a larger, newer space. There are plans to rehab the shelter with a new structure and the city hopes to have contracts for the project in place by the end of the calendar year. With only one remaining member of staff they are working to have other staff fill in shifts at the shelter and are grateful to volunteers.

The unexpected primary is a result of Franklin's abrupt resignation last month just days before he was charged in a felony theft scheme.

The primary election occurs during peak travel season for some, but Prince George's County Board of Elections can help citizens cast their vote via absentee ballot if they cannot get to a voting center and do not want to mail their ballot.

Best Management Practices For Hosting Pollinator Lawns

by Xochitl Zamora-Thompson

Turfgrass – the plants typically used to create a lawn – covers about the same area of land as the eight largest irrigated food crops combined, making it the single largest irrigated “crop” in the United States. Unfortunately, a manicured lawn is a food desert for pollinators and typical lawn maintenance practices pollute the soil, water and air. How can Greenbelters maintain healthy turfgrass in a way that protects pollinators and other wildlife, while providing the comfort and pleasure of turfed areas for recreation?

The following guidelines from the Xerces Society for Invertebrate Conservation, the U.S. Forest Service, the Ecological Landscape Alliance and the Federal Highway Administration are based on studies published in scientific and trade journals. Reduce mowing frequency to about every two weeks, mow from the center of an area outwards, mow mid to late morning or middle of the day and always set the mower height to remove no more than one-third of the grass height.

Flowers provide the nectar and pollen necessary for bees and other pollinators to live. The number and diversity of pollinators in an area is highly dependent on the abundance and diversity of flowering plants. Native plants have been shown to support both a greater abundance and a greater diversity of pollinators than non-native plants. In areas without many native plants, such as urban and suburban areas, the flowers of small plants that many consider weeds provide forage for pollinators early in the season when there may be fewer sources nearby. Any grassy areas with these “weeds” in bloom serve as food waystations between areas with more native plants. Research suggests that a schedule of mowing every two weeks maximizes bee abundance in suburban lawns.

Unfortunately, mowing can directly kill butterfly caterpillars and other pollinators that spend their egg or larval stages on grasses and low vegetation, as well as destroy bumblebee colonies. A handful of small changes in the mechanics of mowing can reduce the number of pollinators and other creatures killed by lawnmowers. Mowing from the center outwards allows pollinators to move away from the blade and wheels of the mower and then back into the mown area or further away. Bees, butterflies and other pollinators are less active early in the morning, at dusk and at night, so they are less able to escape the mower at these times. Mowing during a warmer part of the day will allow more pollinators to survive.

Many years of turfgrass research have shown that removing more than one-third of the blade length impairs root growth and negatively affects the plant's long-term health. For the best turfgrass health, it's best to cut the grass on the higher end of the optimum height range because it promotes healthier roots, minimizes weed growth, maximizes the photosynthetic area of each plant and prevents the lawn from thinning out. Longer grass also helps to keep the soil cooler, reducing the need to water. Mowing lower than the recommended height range, especially during warmer weather, significantly weakens the turf over time and your lawn will require more time, water, resources and energy to stay healthy and attractive.

Peace Month Now Scheduled To Be Observed in September

by Daniel Thies

The Prince George's County Peace and Justice Coalition (PGPJC) will have its annual Peace Month activities in Greenbelt in September and is looking for other groups who would like to contribute to the celebration.

In past years, Peace Month has taken place in June, but this is not the first time that Peace Month has rescheduled in Greenbelt. When the event started, the city designated October as Peace Month, responding to the call by Nobel Laureates for Peace to create “a decade of peace for the children of the world.” In 2009, Peace Month moved from October to June out of consideration for other annual activities that affiliated Greenbelt organizations were engaged with.

Out of that same consideration, the PGPJC requested that September be the new Peace Month for the City of Greenbelt. In recent years, June has been celebrated by the city as Pride Month, and the city has joined with the rest of the country in recognizing Juneteenth. The PGPJC believes that moving Peace Month to September will help to align the City of Greenbelt with the United Nation's International Day of Peace on September 21.

The PGPJC looks forward to collaborating with other Greenbelt organizations to plan September activities relating to peace. Groups interested in being a part of the Greenbelt Peace Month can reach out by email to justpeacepg@gmail.com.

Daniel Thies is a member of the PGPJC.

Outstanding Citizen Linda Ivy Retires as Festival President

by Lois Rosado

Treasure. Jones was selected as Outstanding Greenbelt Citizen in 2012.

Ivy continues to work with the Labor Day Festival Committee and still does the stage and coordinates the various performance activities. She stepped down from the presidency to address family medical matters, but she is very much engaged in her tasks. She recently had health challenges of her own but remains active to ensure that the Labor Day Festival is a wonderful event and fun for everyone in attendance.

Ivy stressed that members of the city council should thank volunteers and appreciate the talent that is given so freely by Greenbelt residents to help maintain the quality of life in the city. She also suggested that the Outstanding Citizen committee place an ad in the Greenbelt News Review listing and celebrating annually all the former Outstanding Citizens – something to consider since there have been 50 Greenbelt residents selected for this honor since 1973.

For more on Linda Ivy's selection as Outstanding Citizen, see the September 14, 2023, issue.

There are many outstanding volunteers working to serve the Greenbelt community and helping to improve all of our lives – use the nomination form found on page 6 to nominate someone.

Kids Discovery Center Offers Nature Learning through Play at Patuxent

In June several children from Greenbelt visited the National Wildlife Visitor Center at the Patuxent Research Refuge. The center has a Kids Discovery Center with nature-related activities, crafts and games with a theme that changes monthly. It is intended for children ages 3 to 10, accompanied by an adult, but older siblings are welcome to assist. When the Greenbelt group visited in June they learned about salamanders. The theme for July is osprey, herons and egrets, for August it will be dragonflies and September will feature water birds such as ducks and geese.

The Visitor Center, located on the Refuge's South Tract, is open Tuesday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and is closed on federal holidays. The Kids Discovery Center is open daily, Tuesday through Saturday. Sessions, each 35 minutes in length, start at 9 a.m., 10 a.m., 11 a.m. and noon. Registration is strongly recommended. Call the Kids Discovery Center Registration line at 301-497-5760 to reserve a time slot.

Greenbelters Travel with the News Review

The News Review traveled with Derrick Early to Cape Kennedy for the successful launch of NASA/NOAA (National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration) GOES weather satellite on Tuesday, June 25. Early has worked for the past 22 years as a mission systems engineer on GOES weather satellites.

Launch successful! It was also very exciting to see (and feel) the sonic boom.

The two re-usable booster rockets by SpaceX return to earth after launching the weather satellite.
